Dear Dr Spence

Sydney University Boat Club shed

Once again we are contacting you to request information on progress with the Sydney University Boat Club shed. We have very strong reason to believe that the university is once again contemplating the use of Cunninghams Reach despite the efforts of the Friends of Cunninghams Reach (FOCR) to have the shed sited elsewhere.

In response to our request for community consultation, your letter of 15 February 2011 stated that, 'The process is nearing a position where a constructive dialogue could be commenced with the community and other stakeholders, and the University recognises FORC (sic) as a key participant. The consultation that will be undertaken will see the kind of transparency I referred to in my address to the alumni group. I expect you will be contacted in the coming weeks to commence that consultation.'

Almost six months have passed since we received your letter and in that time local residents have witnessed people working on planning documents at Cunninghams Reach. This has caused considerable alarm and a call for further protest action from our FOCR team. We have asked them to wait until the end of August for a credible response from you before we take action. We expect to be reassured that the university is not planning to use the Cunningham's Reach site.

Yours sincerely,
