

Our On the Ground Observer's Report June 2011

The Rowing club architect and two rowing club staff(?), were back at Cunninghams Reach the other week, with full plans in hand!

They were walking out and about the proposed building site, and taking heaps of photos from above on the cliff and of the tree locations and tree heights.

I tried getting close to check out the plans, but they packed them up pretty quickly when approached, and were very evasive!....

When they knew they were being watched, they left the site in two separate cars, leaving Lane Cove and headed over the Fig Tree Bridge (towards the City?).

The plans appeared to be at an advanced stage with detailed diagrams and associated colour attachments (several sheets). All must have related to Cunninghams Reach site, as they were referencing the sheets to views and ground.

Clearly activity is advancing and concentrating on Cunninghams Reach! (They didn't seem to have any other plans with them or in the cars for other potential sites? As it was early morning it didn't seem likely that they had visited any other Lane Cove sites prior?).
